Rowing legend Grainger feels Christchurch's Aldridge can star at Olympics

DAME Katherine Grainger believes Christchurch's Matt Aldridge helping British Rowing get back on track sheds new light on a tumultuous Tokyo Games – with a potentially golden Parisian summer in store.

Britain's rowers registered their worst Olympic performance for 49 years in the Japanese capital, falling from first in the medal table in Rio to 14th and prompting a prolonged inquest.

But GB have since finished first and second in the World Championship standings – including men's coxless four gold for Christchurch star Aldridge, 27, in Belgrade – and Grainger believes those results help contextualise what went before.
